"Old Dynamite"

Two-reel Western

JIM COLLINS, head of the XL ranch, digs a boundary sign on the ranch belonging to Cal Lawson (Old Dynamite). Cal catches him in the act and drives him off after a furious verbal scrimmage.

Cal's daughter, Edith, is being annoyed by some bullies when Jack Smith arrives on the scene and rescues her. In return for his gallantry he is given a job. He incurs the displeasure of Hank Williams, foreman of the ranch, and suitor for Edith's favor, by proving himself a superior horseman.

Hank's jealousy increases and he picks a fight with Jack. As they come to blows the XL outfit raids Cal's gang. Jim Collins beats up Cal Lawson until he is driven off by Jack Smith. Hank, who has stood by in cowardly fashion and refused to aid his employer, is fired and his job given to Jack.

Hank schemes with Jim to lure Cal away so they can again raid the ranch and drive off some cattle. Their ruse succeeds and Hank rides off with Edith while her father is held at bay by his accomplices. The sheriff's posse arrives in time to break up the rustling party and capture the remainder of the gang. Jack rescues Cal and his daughter from Hank.
